

Architects
ClaytonLevyLittle

2005 Spicewood House Austin, Texas

Project Description

This complete house remodel represents ClaytonLevyLittle's first design/build venture. Interiors were remodeled extensively – the original cedar paneling was removed down to the wall studs – to showcase the owner's extensive collection of art and photography. Exposed steel and wood beams define discrete areas, especially the kitchen, of the new open plan, with a skeletal steel stair separating the entry from the dining room. Hand-crafted artifacts and elements woven into the clean interiors include an antique Guatemalan wood column that supports the second floor and a hand-forged screen in the concrete fireplace.